THE BANGOR DAILY
WHIG AND COURIER
For 1880
Commenced its Forty Seventh Volume with the New Year, with all departments fully equipped and prepared to maintain its position as one of THE LEADING DAILY PAPERS OF NEW ENGLAND. THE WHIG AND COURIER receives all the telegraphic news of the Maine Associated Press, and has an extensive corps of correspondents throughout the State. The Publishers aim to make it in all respects a First Class Family Newspaper, devoting care to the presentation of entertaining and instructive news and literary matter, to the encouragement of Agriculture, manufacturing and other home interests, with original and selected stories in prose and choice miscellany.
Its Regular Reports
will give the proceedings of Congress and the events at Augusta, which will be chronicled daily by a thoroughly informed special correspondent.
IN THE POLITICAL FIELD
the WHIG AND COURIER will continue to advocate and uphold the Principles of the Republican Party, while claiming to be independent, in the highest and best sense of the word. Fearless and outspoken in the treatment of all public questions and firmly maintaining what they believe to be right, they will avoid intolerance and make their appeals to the understanding rather than to prejudice. The Presidential election and the important issues it involves,—the proceedings of Congress and of our State Legislature—the great activity and improvement in all the industrial and business departments of the country, will make the coming year one of the most exciting and important in the history of the country, and the WHIG AND COURIER congratulates itself that the Republican Party of the Union will enter the year 1880 united upon the platform of Principles which that paper has steadfastly maintained while so many waver!
THE WHIG AND COURIER will be sent by mail postpaid, at the following rates, viz: [illegible]

Deposits at the Houlton Savings Bank are on the increase, varying in amounts from one to five hundred dollars each.
The Presque Isle and Mars Hill choir recently visited Houlton Saturday and sang to S H Paur for one dollar in addition to the payment of the debts of the company. It is understood that the debt of the company amount to about $900.
Cumberland.
From the annual report of the School in North Falmouth we note the following: Total valuation of the town, $700 000; number of polls, 352, whole number of children, 130, rate of taxation $0 70 on $100. The treasurer reports that including cash on hand at the beginning of the year, he has received $10 379 60 and paid out $10 189 90, leaving a balance on hand of $189 70. The present financial condition of the town is: Assets, $6 409 14; liabilities, $4 291 34, balance in favor of the town $2 117 79.
Judge Knight, of Portland, Wednesday morning gave his opinion in the alleged libel suit of the Grays Brothers and Mr Turner. He stated that the laws could not be used to coerce a school by technical suits where there is no real injury. He accordingly dismissed the case without imposing a fine upon any of the parties.
Wm M Marks has printed the report of the town of Westbrook. The valuation of the town is: Real, $815 940; property of the town, $20 966; liabilities, $7 002 18. Westbrook's portion of the town debt, $7 000; loan, $31,700; debt of the town, $6 812 03. The valuation of the town is $1 322 114; rate, $1 75 on $100; polls, [illegible].
The school at West Gorham closed last week after a successful term of sixteen weeks. The closing exhibition by the scholars was a pleasant entertainment and largely attended. Mr Willis O Dyke, the teacher, was presented by his scholars with a handsome rosewood writing desk, which took him completely by surprise.
Sagadahoc
Tuesday night Denis Connolly of Richmond tried the experiment of walking on the railroad track while drunk. He was struck by the Pullman train when just above the village and found by the section men and taken up for dead. He was taken to the Richmond House and examined but no serious injuries were discovered. He had a narrow escape for Dennis and shot at each him and others incited to try such experiments a lesson.
Waldo.
Langdon W. Moore, who was for some months an inmate of Belfast jail while awaiting trial for robbery of the Frankfort Bank, is again in trouble, having been arrested for robbery of the Cambridge post office, and shooting a policeman who discovered him.
The Belfast Journal says: We have before mentioned that a schooner of about three hundred tons was to be built at this place, the coming season, for Capt James McKeen. Carter & Co. have contracted to build her, and the timber for the frame is now being cut. The keel will be laid in the spring a few rods west of the schooner now building by McDonald & Brown.
A horse driven by John Sanborn of Belfast one day last week, backed off the wharf and fell to the deck of a schooner at a distance of about nine feet. The vessel was discharging coal and Sanborn with others was hauling it away in dump carts. Another horse coming across Sanborn's chaise, the latter was backed into, with the above result. Sanborn, who was on the team, fell with his horse, but strange to say neither himself, horse or cart were hurt. The animal remained on the deck of the vessel until high water, when it was taken ashore.
The house of John Ames of Belfast caught fire in the attic on Monday evening but was discovered and extinguished without a general alarm. Loss about $60, insured.
Capt. Farrow, of Islesboro master of the steamer Placer owns a dog which in some respects is a most remarkable animal. The dog never follows any person away from the house, and rarely ever leaves home during week days. When Sunday comes the animal, with a very religious cast of countenance, will march to church and take his place beside the stove. He remains very quiet during services, unless by chance some other canine enters, when there is a row.
Mr. and Mrs John Jan Coombs, of Islesboro, have lost four children, with diphtheria, within a month.
York
The Times says Hon Isaac H Foss has resigned the agency of the York Manufacturing Co, of Saco, from what cause we are unable to state. We have authority however, for saying that Mr Foss was asked by the directors of the above named company to withdraw his resignation to which request he positively refused to comply.

A SHAMEFUL SHEET.

Nothing could be more shameful than the lawless, communistic sheet printed by Fogg, of the infamous Council, and Blood, the former affinity of Victoria Woodhull. These disreputable creatures pour out vile abuse upon the Supreme Court, defend the scoundrelism of the counting out and run a muck against everything that is orderly and decent. In the last issue their sheet contains three or four columns of the ravings of the crazy George Francis Train, in which he denounces the cry of famine in Ireland as a fraud, ridicules the Irish as a nation of beggars, abuses James Gordon Bennett for contributing to the relief fund, and sneeringly declares that "unless he "can send over a corpse or two from "actual starvation his famine boom is a "stillborn child." And yet this same Fogg and Blood, in the same issue of their sheet appeal to all the voters who have heretofore supported the Fusion ticket to rush forward again this Spring to sustain the villany of these State-stealers and communists. Here are some of their appeals:

Every Republican vote in the spring election will be a vote for the revolutionary Government that has overturned the Constitution of the State and trampled the statutes in the mud.

Let every voter in Maine remember that a vote cast in the spring elections for a Republican candidate will be a vote to sustain the infamous action of the Supreme Court.

Every vote cast for a Republican in the spring elections will be a vote of confidence in the mob calling itself the Legislature, now playing at law-making in the stolen State Capitol.

Every vote cast in the spring election in opposition to Republican usurpation and rascality, will be a vote for constitutional government, for law and order, for justice and right, for respect for official purity and performance of official duty according to the oath of office.

And the paper uttering the above is edited by one of the gang of conspirators who but a few months ago were engaged in altering and forging election returns in order to cheat the people out of the legitimate results of a State election!

DON'T WANT TO SEE.

It would be safe to offer several chromo premiums for anything more weak and silly than the Commercial's confession that it does not it tend to print a word of the evidence that conclusively convicts Garcelon and his gang of the basest of knavery in tampering with the election returns. After squirming for some time under the exposures, that paper puts forward the silly plea that the Republicans may have tampered with these returns since they obtained them, while its conductors know that the frauds have been proven by the testimony of Fusion town officers and by the tabulations and documents and the final official action of the conspirators.

Mr. Bass' organ insults public intelligence in its weak attempt to ignore evidence of villany that has shocked and disgusted the whole country. And yet it has the impudence to dispose of these astounding revelations in this manner:

No. We shall not stop to examine charges made by those thieves, until they have cleared themselves of those graver charges of which the people know they are guilty.

Well, the people will find the evidence in other papers and will have something to say about the "thieves."

FATALLY DEFECTIVE.

[From the Boston Journal.]

The testimony which is being taken at Augusta shows that the Fusionists had two very different ways of dealing with what they described as "fatally defective" returns. If the returns in question were those of Republican towns, the action of Governor Garcelon and his Council was short, sharp and decisive. The returns were thrown into the waste-paper basket and their convenient absence from the tabulation elected the Fusion member. But "fatally defective" returns from Fusion towns were treated with extreme tenderness and consideration. They were coddled and nursed and doctored into excellent shape. Officials who had been derelict as to their accuracy in filling out returns were obligingly waited upon, and not simply permitted but entreated to make out new and irreproachable returns. No one can have forgotten the Spartan firmness with which the Governor and his Council threw out those Republican returns in which the clerk had carried out the votes of candidates by the use of ditto marks. It might have been supposed that the significance of ditto marks was unknown to those watchful guardians of popular rights, and that they looked upon them as strange and cabalistic characters. but the Fusion clerk of the Fusion town of Jonesboro' used ditto marks in his return, and he was waited upon, informed of his error, and given a second return to fill out.

Again, the returns from the heavy Greenback town of Brownfield were of "fatally defective" in that they lacked the name of town and county—an important omission which condemned at once any Republican return in which it occurred. But the words wanting were kindly written in after the return was sent to the Governor, and some one also considerately corrected the spelling of the name of the Fusion candidate. Moreover, in the Fusion town of Addison, a mistake was made in adding the votes of two candidates which should have been kept distinct. The clerk was visited and requested to make out a new return, and upon his hesitating to do so, he was threatened with the loss of his office. The town was counted and tabulated, although the return was not corrected. There are other cases, in which initials of candidates were altered in the returns, either to allow the returning board to throw out a candidate, or to count him in, in spite of defects.

These facts indicate that something besides the returns was "fatally defective" in the counting-out business in Maine. There seems to have been a fatal defect in the conscience and the honor of Governor Garcelon and his Council. People have striven hard to believe that Garcelon was consistent in his course, and that he applied, as he claims to have done, the same tests to all the returns. The Governor's motives, we have been repeatedly assured, were of the purest, and although it was beyond question that he and his Council made use of the "technicalities" which they discovered with deliberate partisanship and with a view to constituting the Legislature according to their own wishes, it has been strenuously denied—at least as concerns Garcelon—that there was intentional dishonesty. The disclosures which are being made at Augusta bring to light the exact processes which were employed. The returns were altered, amended and substituted, in defiance, not of justice simply, but of the law. Some of the alterations, indeed, are so clearly of the nature of forgeries that it is an open question whether the men who made them cannot be sent to the penitentiary for their crime. Further developments will be watched with interest, and the inside history of the infamy which Garcelon and his Council perpetrated is likely to be known before the case is finished.

THE UTICA CONVENTION.

[From the New York Herald, Ind.]

The Conkling star is still in the ascendant, but it shines with faded lustre. The Senator has succeeded in controlling the Convention, but by a much narrower majority than his supporters expected and his opponents conceded. The resistance to the third term has proved altogether stronger than anybody dared to hope or ventured to predict twenty-four hours ago. On the exciting question which has been the hinge of the controversy, the question which has caused all the stir of political activity in the Assembly districts during the choice of delegates, the question which was deemed paramount to every other in the estimation of both the Republican factions and of all outsiders—on this central question, which dwarfed and eclipsed every other, Mr. Conkling and his powerful machine has had a narrow escape from defeat! Day before yesterday it was claimed by the machine and virtually conceded by its adversaries that it had a majority of the delegates numbering from 135 to 140. But when the Convention was brought to a vote on the vital question of declaring for the ex-President, the actual machine majority was found to be only 37!

Oh, what a falling of was here, my Countrymen!

Had the contesting delegations been admitted from Albany, Oneida and other counties the resolution committing the Convention to the ex-President would have been lost.

The vote which had this mortifying result was taken immediately after Senator Conkling had made one of the most dexterous speeches ever delivered in a political convention. All the previous work of the machine in the Assembly districts and all the force of Mr. Conkling's eloquence barely saved the resolution from defeat. This unexpected demonstration of weakness after the machine had done its utmost, and when the great Senator was on the ground to command his forces in person, will encourage the anti-third term Republicans in other States, and especially the supporters of Mr. Blaine, who won't have had a majority at Utica, had the Convention been a fair expression of the rank and file preference of the New York Republicans.

* * * Of course the New York delegates will not be bound by their instructions after the ex-President is practically out of the field. It is competent for the National Convention to release them, and it will release them if there is an anti-third term majority, or if the Convention is close enough to annul the instructions with the votes of such Pennsylvania and New York delegates as desire to be released. There is a wide and promising field for effort by the friends of the rival candidates. If they are wise they will not make war upon one another. If each works in his own field and gets all the delegates he can their combined strength will make a majority against the ex-President and his name will be withdrawn. Vermont instructed her delegates yesterday to vote for Senator Edmunds, which are so many diverted from the ex-President. If Mr. Sherman gets Ohio and some of the Southern States whatever strength he has will be so much against the third term. Senator Blaine will make a strong show, and when the aggregate strength of all the rivals has crowded the ex-President out there will be an open field and fair play for the others. The prospect looks hopeful for a rapid subsidence of the third term boom, and the withdrawal of the ex-President before the National Convention meets.

[From the N. Y. Tribune.]

It was the right of the majority to instruct the delegates at large or to pledge their vote, which amounts to the same thing. But here the power of the Convention stopped. The efforts of the Grant managers did not stop, however. They sought to make the delegates from anti-Grant Districts believe that they are in honor bound to accept the pledge as applying to them as well as to the delegates at large. Some of these delegates are reported to have made the mistake of giving their submission to this interpretation of the resolution. If they have really done so they had better correct their error at once. No man chosen to represent a Blaine district at Chicago can vote for Grant and plead the Convention's resolution in justification of his course, unless the nomination of Grant should be a foregone conclusion. In case of a contest, a delegate who disobeys the instructions of his district will have a reckoning to settle with his constituents, and will find himself instantly retired by them from public life.

"A FOOL'S ERRAND, BY ONE OF THE FOOLS."

[For the Whig and Courier.]

I.

At last, the wrongs of the Southern Republicans have found a voice to tell their story with the power of Genius. The leaden apathy, the crust of indifference, that once kept the North silent on the question of Slavery, was broken by the story of Uncle Tom's Cabin, sent on its way as a Novel, to every Library in the land,—finding as Waldo Emerson said, "an audience in the Parlor, the Nursery, and the Kitchen," a power that belongs only to Genius. With more strength of analysis, and a deeper wrestling with more intricate problems, than the simple one of Slavery, we anticipate for "A Fool's Errand," a more careful reading, and a greater influence on the future of our country, than the famous anti-slavery novel possessed.

It is a curious tribute to the power of the novel form as a method of instruction, that one of the great men of New York city, said, after reading "A Fool's Errand" —"It has opened my eyes"—volume after volume of Ku Klux trials have been printed and sent over the land—some of our great newspapers told the story in part, at least, but eyes even of intelligent men, have not been opened. Let the friends of justice be glad that eyes are now seeing.

And yet, the tale of "A Fool's Errand" resulted from the experience of a Northern man in North Carolina, an old Whig State, far less barbarous than South Carolina, Mississippi, or Louisiana. Ah, the barbarities of these last named States, have been too awful for the purposes of Art. No novel writer could work into his pages the loathesome obscene features that characterized the Bourbon Democracy in the more southern States; while Hamburg massacres, and Chisholm murders are too painful for pictured tragedy. These things must be left for the terrible details of courts, for the frightful revelations before Congressional committees. Are not Hamburg and Ellenton, and Edgefield all described by numerous witnesses, whose testimony carries conviction to all who read? And are not the volumes that hold the story, all silent now on Congressional shelves, because forsooth their circulation might have hindered the charming "policy of conciliation?"

"This testimony when given to the country, will create such a storm of indignation, as will sweep their party out of existence;" so said a Southern Republican in S. C., and his own efforts in supplying papers and copies, drew heavily on a purse already largely taxed for the needs of Republican sufferers. "What was it all for," when Hayes handed them over to their foes?

Dist. Atty. Corbin, whose work it was, to go to the lawless counties of S. C., and take testimony—a work that only a very brave man would have dared to venture upon,—said that the outrages of '76, were as bad as in the worst Ku Klux times, the only difference being that the things done secretly by the Klan were done openly by the Rifle Clubs."

In the county of Barnwell, at one time, not a negro was to be found except hidden in the woods; for they were shot down in the field, in open day, and the relatives of the murdered ones were forbidden to bury them, that greater terror might be inspired! If the readers of "A Fool's Errand" think the picture of Southern cruelties and political persecution, is painted in too strong colors, they will make a mistake. Had the author's experience been gained in South Carolina instead of North, the colors must have been far deeper to have kept pace with the truth. And brave and heroic as Servosse was, in his place, more than one carpet bagger in South Carolina excelled him in this. Ah, their heroism deserved a better fate than it found.

I do not know that I am telling you any secret now, when I say that the author of this book is Judge Tourgee, who lived fourteen years in North Carolina; that he has written other novels; that all the incidents of Ku-Klux atrocities are from life; that Judge Denton who narrowly escaped being roasted alive, was Judge Settle; that John Walters was State Senator Stevens; and I may add from indisputable authority that the letter from the U. S. Senator, was a verbatim copy of one actually received by Judge Tourgee. A description of the Senator is given, but I must leave you to guess who. Several have guessed correctly, but no one has a right, perhaps, to give the name to print. The letters of "Metta" are the letters of Mrs. Tourgee, written home. They do not read like fiction. The author of this book has evidently designed to obtain Southern readers, and he has had them. Even the "Okolona States," finds rare enjoyment in it. All that there is in the Southern character to praise, Judge Tourgee has diligently portrayed; while the short comings of the North, that gained the victory in the terrible war, and then lazily let the fruits of it slip from their grasp—that proclaimed emancipation to the negroes, without ensuring to them the "life, liberty and pursuit of happiness," which belongs to American Freedom; that spread its flag over the rebellious States, yet left the Union men in it to the mercy of rebels; that North is held up by the author of this book to such reproach, that we are not surprised that a Southern writer says: "There are passages in it, that make a Democrat chuckle."

There is one fact in connection with this remarkable book that may possibly make some one chuckle, and perhaps it may make some other one feel like break ng the third commandment. It is, that this terrible indictment of the wrong permitted by the Federal Government to be practiced upon Southern Republicans, should have been sent to President Hayes, and that he should have expressed himself delighted with it, and sent an order for ten copies!

The cunning praise of Southern character, which is to win an audience for a book that must help their education, away from barbarism towards civilization reminds one of the sale which Disraeli's novel of "Lothair" obtained through all the South. In its pages a Southern planter is introduced, and a few sentences in praise of the American Southern planters, as a class, "Lothair"—from every book store of the South gleamed in big letters—"Lothair just received." This, too, in a community that disdained Dickens, and Thackeray, and George Eliot, one in which its literary authorats, one of them at least, said there had been "no novels worth reading, since Walter Scott."

THE "BARREL" AGAIN.

Another of Fogg's Admirers.

FRANK HAMBLEN, OF OLDTOWN, ADMIRES FOGG BUT DENOUNCES THE COMMERCIAL.

Among the contents of that "barrel" left at the State House was the following effusion from another Oldtown Fusionist, addressed to "Hon. F. M. Fogg, State House, Augusta."

OLDTOWN, Dec. 27, '79.

Mr Fogg,

DEAR SIR: You are a man after my own heart.

We had a good laugh at Maj. Folsom's yesterday, over a story Samuel Hoskins told about you and Lewis Barker.

It appeared by the Hoskins yarn, that the attempt of Barker & Powers to overawe and bulldoze you when you were in the room of the Secretary of State, met with a signal failure.

Your way of dealing with these christian statesmen was eminently proper as well as successful.

We must meet these fellows toe to toe, and if possible go one better.

The letter of the Governor to L. Morrill, worries me some, still I suppose, he in his better judgement must be right.

As I look at, the case is closed, legally forever, so far as his honor and the Council are concerned.

We don't want any references. There is nothing to refer.

We don't want another seven to eight swindle. No, never.

His Honor and the Council can attend to their business without advice from their enemies.

Advice and petitions from ones bitter enemies are not worth much.

When our friends move in this way then will be the time to listen to such council.

I take your paper and like it much. It is a model paper. The news is correct, and the politics red hot.

The Bangor Commercial is at heart with the hard money Democrats and Republicans.

The political part of it is wishy washy, namby pamby, milk and water stuff.

Its sound is very uncertain. It is on the fence, waiting for the mud to dry up, so that it can drop on to the Republican side.

Respectfully Yours,

FRANK HAMBLEN.

The senseless hullabaloo raised by the Fusion organs that the Republicans have not given a bill of items to be paid out of the $18,000 appropriated for the expense of protecting the public property and preserving order during the excitement and alarm caused by the Fusion usurpation, will not divert attention from the revelations of the great crime. Every dollar of that money must be expended under warrants from the Governor and Council, and they will not imitate Garcelon in disposing of State funds without producing vouchers. The whole of the expense is directly chargeable to the scheming revolutionists who so nearly inaugurated anarchy.

A Dublin despatch says the Freeman's Journal denounces Parnell's attack on the Mansion House Committee and the Duchess of Marlborough as an outrage.

THE BAND CONCERT—MUSICAL STARS.

A SONG OF DAVID.

Ask the famous old Kendrakong,
With its charming silver tide,
Rolling slower as it loiters on,
The Lover's Leap beside,
Why attentively it listens,
In its merriment and glee,
As it waits by Stormbega,
On its journey to the sea?

Ask the Hero of the Legend,
The maiden in her pride,
Why the fatal plunge so daring,
Of the bridegroom and the bride?
The river softly murmurs,
With each ripple lover free
"De ange's Magic Cornet
Evermore enchanteth me!"

Ask a lady down to Bangor,
Why she feels so gratified
On each Monday morning early?
"Couldn't tell you, if she died!
Only that the voice of Trundy,
Like a cheery cup of tea,
Turns the horrid fuss of washing
To a jolly little spree!"

Ask a gay and happy couple
What sweet memories abide?
"Not the gayest midnight dances,
Nor the moonlight evening ride—
The inspiring Song of Nazareth
Never can forgotten be,—
It delight eth like the warbling
In a summer shady tree."

Ask the doncon pr his daughter
Why they laughed until they cried,
And the meanest stingy miser
Why so ready to divide?
"O we heard the Big Band Concert,
And our diaphragms agree,
All the world is beat in Packard,—
No matter for the fee!"

Go and hear the Grandest Concert,
Time and money well applied—
You will leave it quite unwilling,
Yet completely satisfied;
Keep your conscience free and easy—
As a consequence, you see,
Thou will need to draw a Trundle Bed,
For a Trundy draweth thee!

A resolve was reported to print insurance laws Printed.

A bill was reported to repeal special laws relating to taking fish in Webb's pond in Weld. Read twice and assigned.

Perry of Camden, presented the following and spoke in favor of its adoption:

Ordered—That the Commissioners on State valuation be requested to ascertain the municipal indebtedness of every city, town and plantation, in the State and report as soon as possible by publishing the same in one of the daily papers in each of the cities of Portland, Bangor, Augusta and Lewiston. The order was indefinitely postponed.

A bill was reported to elect the city and City Marshal of Bath annually in March by the city Council. Read twice.

Order relating to amending city charter of Augusta was referred to the next Legislature

A bill was presented to incorporate Moosehead Plantation into a town. Read once

A bill was reported authorizing the Clerk and Assistant Clerk of the House and the Secretary and Assistant Secretary of the Senate to amend the journals of their respective houses, in accordance with facts. This is to allow the clerical officers of the last Legislature to amend their journals in relation to biennial sessions and elections.

Bill to enlarge the powers and duties of the Fish Commissioners and Wardens came up on its passage to be engrossed. Gilmore of Meddybemps, spoke in favor. Crane of Winthrop, opposed. The bill was refused a passage by 43 to 34. It was then indefinitely postponed by a vote of 45 to 32.

The House reconsidered the vote giving a passage to the bill incorporating the Steam Heating and Power Co., of Portland, and pending the adoption of certain amendments offered by Verrill of Portland the matter was assigned for Tuesday next

The bill to incorporate the Bridgton & Presumpscot R R. Co, was taken from the table and amended on motion of Bradstreet of Bridgton, so as to allow connection with the Portland & Ogdensburg R R, if such connection should be as advantageous as connecting with the Portland & Rochester R. R, and in case of disagreement the matter to be decided by the Railroad Commissioners. Also that the act to take effect when approved. The bill was then given passage without any appropriation.

Goulding of West Waterville, was appointed on the Bribery Committe of investigation in place of Wentworth unable to serve.

Pending its passage to be engrossed Verrill of Portland, moved the indefinite postponement of the bill to provide for the organization of business corporations, and briefly spoke in support of his motion, contending that this bill swept away all barriers in the limitation of capital stock. The bill was indefinitely postponed.

A petition was received from Wm. B Hayford and others of Bangor, praying for the restoration of the number of Judges of the S. J. Court.

The bill to abolish the office of Land Agent was taken from the table on motion of Dickey of Fort Kent, who opposed the bill and believed it was highly important to keep the office intact and entire. Verrill of Portland, remarked that Burleigh, a former Land Agent, and Clark, present Land Agent had stated before the committee which reported the bill that the office could be abolished after a few matters were closed up which could be done shortly. The duties of Land Agent are simply clerical, and can be performed by a clerk in the Secretary of State's office, where the bill transfers them. The State owns but little land, unless it may be some islands that haven't been discovered yet. Dickey moved that the bill be indefinitely postponed. Lost. Dickey moved to amend so that the act shall take effect in six months after its approval by the Governor. Lost. The bill was then passed to be engrossed

The Swan-Harriman Charges of Bribery.

The Committee on the alleged bribery of members of the House a charged by Swan and Harriman held a meeting in Representatives Hall this afternoon. Wallace R. White was present, and his counsel, L D. Carleton, said his client did not object to receiving the testimony of J. O White, or any one else that could throw light on the subject. J O. White, a Fusionist counted-in member from Wilton, then repeated his allegation that W. R. White had sobght to bribe him, and afterwards T. B. Swan, Fusionist Representative from Mechanic Falls, rehearsed the story he has so often told of how White gave him $1,000 to surrender his seat and how he arranged with Secretary Gove and others to take the money for the sake of exposing bribery. Swan's examination was not concluded, but Earriman will be heard next, and then Wallace R. White. Mr. Carleton cross examined on behalf of Mr White and Representative Ingalls put the questions on the other side The committee adjourned at 6 o'clock to Tuesday next at 2 P M

"SETTLED AT WASHINGTON"

A Forgery in the Berwick Return.

AN INITIAL CHANGED TO COUNT OUT A REPUBLICAN SENATOR.

The Change Also Made in Garcelon's Tabulation.

The Counted-in Attorney for Washington County.

AUGUSTA, Feb 27 E. K Smart, counted-in Fusion County Attorney of Washington County, testified before Mr. Hale's Committee this afternoon. He was verbose and with many words attempted to conceal the facts which the Committee desired to elicit. He testified that before the September election he had been supplied with documents coming he thought from Augusta, among them a blank Senatorial return with official envelope. He said he traveled quite extensively through the County and used this blank and envelope to instruct clerks as to their duty. He found Fusion clerks already well posted. In case Republican officials did not do their duty they were going to elect officers pro tem and have correct returns made out. He offered to let the Town Clerk of Marion have the blank to make out a new return on How the Robbinston Return was Counted.

The return from Robbinston was made out for John T. Wallace, Fusion candidate for Senator, leaving the "Jr." from his name. Smart obtained an affidavit from a man who made his mark, who made oath that he voted for John T. Wallace, Jr. The return was shown to the committee and though it was for John T. Wallace it was counted for John T. Wallace, Jr., and so put in the tabulation of Governor Garcelon and Council. Smart confessed to having had correspondence with Pillsbury, Stacy and S D. Leavitt, but did not bring their letters with him. He kept himself supplied with affidavits ready for use and when asked his object replied: "For prudential reasons"

The Berwick Case—A Forgery Traced Direct to the Council Chamber.

John H. Stillings, Town Clerk of Berwick, appeared before the committee and testified in regard to the return from his town. The name of one of the Republican candidates for Senator, Hon. George H. Wakefield, had been changed to George A. Wakefield, it being done by closing the top of the "H" with a semi circle. As soon as Mr. Stillings put his eye upon it he pronounced it a glaring forgery. He had never made a capital "A" in that form. When the return left his hand it was a plain H. When Garcelon's first tabulation was made out it showed 258 votes for George H. Wakefield, that was erased with a knife or other sharp instrument and further down appeared the 258 votes for George A. Wakefield, to compare with the forged return. Thus Mr. Wakefield was counted out and a Fusionist counted in instead.

INSIDE LINE We understand that the steamers, Lewiston and City of Richmond, of the Inside Line, are to be thoroughly overhauled this season and several new state rooms added to each. It is expected that the company will put a new and faster boat than the Houghton on the Penobscot river during the coming season, to connect with the Richmond at Rockland.

WORTHY OBJECTS. Rev S S. Cummings, of Boston, and connected with the Baldwin Place "Home for Little Wanderers," will be one of the speakers at City Hall Sunday afternoon, at the regular meeting of the Bangor Reform Club, and a number of the little wanderers will sing The proceeds of the meeting will be equally distributed between the Baldwin Place Home for Little Wanderers and the Children's Home in this city

Rev. S. S. Cummins, of Boston, will deliver an address upon the work of the Baldwin Place, "Home for Little Wanderers," in the First M. E. church to morrow at half past ten in the morning, at the Reform Club meeting at four in the afternoon and at the Hammond street church at half-past seven in the evening. A choir of children will be present, and sing some choice pieces of Music. All are invited. A collection will be taken.

CRUSADE ENTERTAINMENT. A fair audience assembled in City Hall last evening to the entertainment given by the ladies' Crusade. A song by Miss Chapman, select readings by Miss Low and Miss Clark were well received. The vocal and instrumental music by the celebrated Peak family brought forth much applause and was followed by a reading by Mr. Johnson, song by Mr. Allchin and a quartette by students of the Theological Seminary. The entertainment closed by select reading by Mr Woodbridge of the Seminary. The entertainment merited a larger audience than was present.

APPOINTMENTS. The Governor has appointed the following Justices of the Peace and Quorum. W. W. Sanborn, Lewiston, Thomas S. Perkins, Mars Hill; Emery S Redlon, Joseph M. Plummer, Portland; Herman Stinson Houghton, Wilton; Henry W. Sargent, Sedgwick; F. O. Hichborn, Geo. W. Kimball, Rockland; Henry W Piper, Camden; Orrin Foster, Newry; D. S. Austin, Gilead; A. M. Robinson, Dover; Henry Hudson, Guilford; Granville Purinton, Rowdoin; Geo. W. Field, Ezra Andrews, Harmony; Frank R. Webber, St. Albans; Wm. G. Harriman, Meddybemps; Samuel H. Nickerson, Calais; Charles A. Pike, Cornish; Jas. F. Brackett, Limington.

A BOLD TRAMP. A. three little girls and one boy were leaving the premises of one of the neighbors on G. P. Ridge in North Montville, they were frightened by a tramp and ran back for help at Cushman Thompson's. Mr. Thompson seeing the girls in great fright, sent Ebenezer Poland back to protect them and he arrived in due time to save the girls from further insult As the tramp was running around Deacon White's barn, he fired at him twice but did not hit him. Ebenezer then ran to the door, and aroused his neighbor, Deacon White, the latter came out, run to the barn and secured a pitchfork ready for a fight but the tramp had left. They returned home and heard no more of him that night, but in the morning it became known that the same tramp visited a barn owned by John McDonald and carried off his only horse. The report went through the neighborhood like electricity. The people are somewhat excited on its account, and are in pursuit of the tramp.

EXECUTIVE AND LEGISLATIVE RECEPTION. We have received cards for the Executive and Legislative Reception for 1880, which is to be held at Granite Hall, Augusta, Thursday evening, March 4 The Reception Committee consists of Governor Davis, President of the Senate Locke and Speaker Weeks, and their wives; and the Executive Committee is composed of members of the Council, Senate and House, including Representatives Silas C. Hatch and John L Cutler of this city. Reception at 8, dancing at 9.

DENMAN THOMPSON. The sale of seats for "Joshua Whitcomb" will commence at D. Bugbee & Co's., this morning, and will probably be one of the largest ever known here. Everybody is going to see "Uncle Josh," and all want the best seats. During Mr. Thompson's present New England tour, the advance sale of reserved seats is entirely unparalled. In Manchester, over 1,200 seats were sold during the first and second days, which was two weeks previous to the date of the performance. In Holyoke, where "Josh" had been played in January, the entire house—1008 seats—was sold the first day the box sheet was open. Lynn, Worcester, Chelsea, Manchester, and, in fact, all the cities where the company appeared previous to Bangor, have not a ticket left.

THE FREESE CASE. It is thought possible that the Edward Freese who recently left the fortune at Dwight, Ill., was Edward Le Foret Freese who married a Miss Davis, of Deering, in 1860. They resided at Cape Elizabe h and Freese served in the regular army through the war. After the war he failed to support his family and his wife got a divorce. Freese cleared out and, it is reported, went West and prospered His family returned to London. This is all surmise. The original story says Freese narrated the facts published, that is he revealed to these relatives at or near Portland, Me., all about the treasure. Possibly the so-called relatives may have been persons who tended the man in his last illness. The Freese mentioned above had a son by his Deering wife, who is with his mother in California.

PEDESTRIAN MATCH. The entries in the twenty seven hours go-as-you-please race which takes place in Norombega Hall next Wednesday and Thursday, March 3—4—up to Friday evening, are as follows Henry Redding, Woonsocket, R. I; Frank J. Hanson, Dover, N H.; Philip Frey, Jr, Bangor; George E. Harrington, Boston; Frank B. Veazie, Chelsea; Unknown, Lewiston; "Old Sport," Company, Bridgeport, Conn., Christopher Toole, Bangor; D. J. Hertz, Revere, Mass.; James Fitz, or Unknown, Medford, Mass., Jerry Holtrihan, Boston; Charles Walker, Newark N. J; Willard Corliss, "Caribou Hunter" Houlton, George Dufrowne, New York city Entries close Monday evening next St. John's Band, W. R McQuown Leader will furnish music. Mr. Gillespie will spare no pains to make this a fine athletic enterprise. Full particulars in this paper next week.

INFRINGEMENTS ON A PATENT. The Lewiston Journal says A short time ago we recorded the fact that an agent of the owner of a patent bronze varnish was in the city, for the purpose of detecting infringements of the patent. The result is that a notice of a suit for damages has been served on each of the hardware dealers in this city and Auburn. Hiram Tucker is the owner of the patent bronze in question, and the bronze is used in ornamenting hundreds of articles kept by every hardware dealer. The retailers are of course innocent and will look to the manufacturers of whom they bought their goods, for protection. Several large manufacturing firms have already settled with Mr. Tucker, and have notified their customers that Mr T, has no claim on them for selling goods of their manufacture Nearly all the manufacturers will probably settle, and very few suits will probably be tried Mr. Tucker will reap a large harvest by the operation, as every hardware manufacturer and dealer is affected by his claim.

BENEFIT CONCERT MISS Gertie F Edmands who sings in the benefit concert next Thursday evening, seems to be a favorite wherever she goes In commenting upon a concert in that place the East Boston Gazette under date of February 7th says. Miss Edmands, daughter of Mr. T. O. Edmands of orchestra fame, sang in part first and second, the first, "Cleansing fires," by Gabriel, and the second, "The arrow and the Song." Miss Edmands has not sung in East Boston for two years, during which time she has made wonderful progress. Her voice is a rich contralto resembling very closely that of Miss Annie Louise Cary, a formidable rival of whom she is destined to become The rule "no encores" was made a dead letter in Miss Edmands' case, the audience insisting on her return, which she did, and sang "Home, Sweet Home," thrilling her auditors with delight. We have never seen a more brilliant success than that won by Miss Edmands last Sunday evening Those who remember her exquisitely touching rendering of those same songs here, will fully appreciate the Gazette's enthusiasm.

Police Court.

In the Police Court yesterday Dennis Finnegan was fined $5 and costs for drunkenness and appealed.

Hugh Dogan for the same offence was fined $3 and committed for thirty days in default of payment.

Edward Wilson, the drunken tramp was committed for thirty days on a suspended mittimus.

"YORICK'S LOVE"

Lawrence Barrett

An audience composed of Bangor's first citizens filled Norombega Hall to repletion last evening, on the occasion of the presentation of the play, "Yorick's Love," by Lawrence Barrett and a very strong support. If the audience was not particularly demonstrative at times it was not because of a lack of appreciation, but because Barrett's acting was so powerful, grand and true to nature, that it was difficult to keep out of mind that a tragedy was not in reality being enacted before the very eyes of the audience, and that any applause would be out of place. The following is the plot of the piece:

Yorick is a young comedian, 45 years of age, the husband of a young wife and foster-father to a grown son. The wife and foster-son have played in the same company, and much against their best impulses, loved. This is their only crime. Yorick has no suspicion of the fact. A new play is to be brought out, in which there is no comedy part. Yorick beseeches the leading role, which is that of an injured husband—unwittingly desires to play his own life on the stage. The manager reluctantly consents. This enrages the "leading man" of the theatre and he becomes a sort of Iago. Yorick's wife is cast as the unfaithful spouse and the foster-son, Edmund, as an adopted son and betrayer in the new play.

Thus they are to act in their own real lives. The agony of Alice and Edmund is terrible; they know not how to go through such an ordeal. In the second act this Iago influences Yorick's jealousy against his wife, but even then Yorick does not mistrust his protege. The third act is a play within a play. It opens in the green room of the theatre. Here are some very strong scenes. The villain's envious hate grows as Yoricks success as a tragedian is apparent. Yorick has demanded proofs During the evening Alice has received a note from Edmund, announcing his purpose of flight and beseeching her to go with him. This the villain Walton obtains. In the play he is to hand a similar letter to Yorick, which would be a blank piece of paper; but when, in the next scene, which is supposed to be the stage of the Globe Theatre, he hands Yorick this letter the climax is reached.

Yorick's grief is terrible, his rage is greater. He, of course, puts the worst interpretation on their relations, and shows the guilty parties the missive. This for a moment breaks up the action of the mimic play, but Yorick regains his composure, forms a terrible purpose and proceeds with his lines. When he comes to the place where he kills the perfidious lover he does his work in earnest, and Edmunds falls dead at his feet. The stage is soon crowded with the attaches of the theatre, and the manager announces that one of the actors having been accidently wounded the play cannot proceed. A transparent screen then falls, and the real play and the mimic one are closed by the suicide of Yorick.

We give below the cast

Mastor Yorick, Comedian of the Globe Theatre	Mr Lawrence Barrett
Master Edmund, Protege of Yorick	Mr. Gustavus Levick
Master Haywood, Manager of Globe Theatre	Mr Frederick Bock
Master Walton, Leading actor at Globe Theatre	Mr J R Grismer
Master Woodford, Author of the "New Play"	Mr E A. Locke
Gregory, an old Servant of Yorick	Mr J. B Curran
Thomas, Prompter of the Globe Theatre	Mr Frank Little
William, Servants of Warrenne the Painter	Mr. F. C Moseley
Georges, Mimics All Parts of Yorick	Mr Chas Hawthorne
Mistress Dore by, Maid of Alice	Miss Ellen Cummins
	Miss Carrie Wyatt

Any criticism on Mr. Barrett's acting is entirely uncalled for, as his reputation is such that the mere mention of his name is all that is necessary to attract audiences, limited only by the capacity of the house where he plays. The support was one of the very best. At the close of the performance Mr Barrett was called before the curtain Andrews' orchestra rendered choice music during the evening.

Bangor and Piscataquis Railroad.

To the Editor of the Whig & Courier

Will it be in the interests of Bangor to sell the above railway property at this present time, or at any future time, on the terms proposed by the City Government?

I am clearly of opinion that it is most decidedly against their interests, a present loss and a future injury. The city owns to-day in fee and absolutely, this road from Oldtown to Blanchard, a distance of about sixty-three miles, with only a distance of thirteen miles to complete it to Moosehead Lake, to make it a valuable road paying the interest on the whole amount of the original cost

The road as it now stands has cost the city not far from fourteen hundred thousand dollars, and this amount includes the original stock subscription of two hundred thousand dollars, and the interest, both of which last have been paid. Deducting these last two amounts from the first named sum it leaves the sum of nine hundred thousand dollars on which the city is liable to pay interest less thirty six thousand dollars receivable from the annual earnings of the road.

The City Government proposes to sell this road to an English or Canadian company for the payment by them of the annual interest on the bonds of six hundred thousand dollars, the same to be secured by a mortgage on the road from Oldtown to Blanchard, and on the thirteen miles of road when built from Blanchard to Moosehead Lake, and pay the bonds at the expiration of thirty years.

This proposition of the City Government is subject, fortunately, to the approval of the citizens, to be expressed by their votes in their several wards. The objections to the sale are grave and serious, looking to the future growth and welfare of our city What are the objections?

First. The road, the thirteen miles to Moosehead Lake being built, is worth to the city every dollar it has cost.

Second The road should never be sold at any time or for any sum to any English or other foreign company, or any company outside of Bangor not having a direct interest in its prosperity

Third The security amounts to nothing, no cash being paid, the city has just what it had and nothing more, its puts into the hands of a foreign company to manage a railroad, with a liability to disputes, vexations and law suits, which has always been well managed by the city, and in regard to which there need be no distrust in the future.

Can it be that there are not enough gentlemen of capital in this enterprising city to build and complete the thirteen miles to Moosehead Lake? If an effort were made it could be done by stock subscription on a guarantee from the city that they will pay six per cent. on the cost when completed, or if this last cannot be done then let the stockholders of the Road have its earnings, say for four years, on condit on they build it to Moosehead Lake.

Who is the English Company to whom the City Government propose to sell this Road? It is as I understand, a Company known as the Megantic Railway Company, who have built or are building a Road from Lennoxville, a point on the Grand Trunk Railway, to the north western boundary line of the State of Maine. It is not known whether this Road so far as it is completed is built with their own capital or on borrowed capital subject to a mortgage, and it is not of consequence further than to show their pecuniary ability to negotiate for the purchase of the Road

If I am correct this Megantic Company is poor, and in order to complete their own Road and build the thirteen miles between Blanchard and Moosehead Lake, it is necessary for them to have control of the Piscataquis Road to consolidate it with their own, on which they expect to hire money in London to carry out the negotiation with this city.

It is almost a straight line running east and west from Montreal to Halifax, and a direct route by Rail to and from those points is a necessity.

The British Government has recently expended thirty millions in widening the Welland Canal, on which they had previously expended twenty-five millions, and in less than three years British ships of two thousand tons will sail up the St. Lawrence and through the Welland Canal, and load and unload at the docks of Chicago and other like ports. The great products of the west are coming to Montreal and so direct to Europe. In order further to control the Western traffic a port on the Atlantic is necessary. Halifax, St. John or St. Andrews present themselves as the terminal of the Megantic Railway, and there is but one way by which those points can be reached and that is over the Piscataquis Railroad. Therefore let me advise and urge the citizens of Bangor to vote against its sale to any foreign Company. J. C.

FROM CALAIS

Masonic Installation

CALAIS, Feb. 23d.

Mr. Editor At 4 45 p. m. the members of the various Masonic bodies in this city, assembled at their hall and formerly opened the lodge for the ceremonies. At 5.30 they formed in line and marched to St. Croix Hall where the ceremonies were publicly performed. The exercises opened with music by the choir, prayer by Rev. Mr. Eldridge, and another musical selection, after which the following officers of St. Croix Lodge, F. & A. M., No. 46, were duly installed. C. A. McCollough, W. M.; R. B. Tyler, S. W., E. C. Goodnow, J. W.; L. C. Bailey, Treas.; S. D. Morrill, Sec.; O. B. Rideout, Chap, John A. Sears, Marshall, M. Tait, S. D., W A. Walden, J. D; Ira Leighton, S. S, W. R. Kerr, J. S.; Robert Riley, Tyler. The ceremonies were conducted by E. H. Vose, J. G. W, and J. F. Oliver as Grand Marshal.

An intermission of ten minutes then occurred, during which instrumental music was furnished by the organist, Rev. Mr. Pushton, of St. Stephen, N B, in a manner which reflected great credit upon his musical ability. After prayer by Rev. Mr. Eldridge, the following officers of St. Croix R. A. Chapter, No 17, were installed S. D. Morrill, H. P, A. Mulligan, K, James L. Thompson, S. L. C. Bailey, Treas; B. M. Flint, Rec; Rev. Mr. Eldridge, Chap; C. A. McCollough, C H, Geo. W Hutchins, R A C; J. F. Oliver, P S. A. Tower, 1st V., W. H. Evand, 2d V; M. Tait, 3rd V; R. Riley, Sen. The above ceremonies were performed by Austin F. Kingsley, Grand King, of the G R A. C. of Maine.

At the close of the above ceremonies an oration was delivered by Mr. N. B. Nutt, of Eastport, P. E. C., in a most able and impressive manner. The hall was filled to its utmost capacity, not even standing room being available. The audience assembled was composed of the highest type of intelligence which they demonstrated by the intense interest manifested and the profound silence observed during the oration. The official ceremonies were performed with promptness, showing that a high degree of perfection had been attained by the officiating officers. The hall was handsomely and tastily decorated with flags, emblems and ornaments of the different bodies. The furniture of walnut and scarlet rep, together with a fine cabinet organ, all the property of the different bodies adorned the platform. At eight o clock the members, together with friends, adjourned to Pike's Opera House where a most inviting spectacle was presented, in the shape of an elegant supper, which had been prepared by the lady friends of the order. Everything was in a high state of perfection, and plenty and order seemed to reign triumphant, although between five and six hundred persons were seated around the tables. At about nine o'clock a large number made their way back to St. Croix Hall, where a fine band was in waiting to discourse music for those wishing to enjoy tripping the light fantastic toe Between eighty and a hundred couples presented themselves on the floor all in high glee when the music began, and all went merrily until between two and three o'clock, when the company dispersed, feeling highly delighted with the great success which crowned their individual and united efforts.

A MEDICINAL WINE FOR KIDNEY COMPLAINT. In this age of "extended liquors," it is pleasant to know that there is one article of pure wine in the market for medicinal use. We have reference to Speer's Sambuca Wine, which was on exhibition at the Fair, and a glass was given to each visitor who claimed it. A glass was proffered to me, and I touched it to my lips somewhat unwillingly, but was agreeably disappointed in finding it one of the most delicious Wines I had ever tasted I doubt whether there is a vineyard in the Old or New World that can yield a Wine at all comparable to this in richness and delicacy of flavor. Mr Speer prepares it by a new process peculiar to himself, without the addition of spirits, and each bottle he sells is guaranteed to be four years old. It is largely used in New York and European hospitals or Dropsy, Gout and all kidney complaints. It has found its way it would seem, to London and Paris Hospitals, as the best Wine to strengthen and build up a consumptive or debilitated system —Boston Evening Transcript. Sold by N S Harlow, Bang

A GREAT TEMPTATION.

CHAPTER I.

Mr. Vaughan, or Squire Vaughan, of Barclay Manor, was a man of high degree in his country—a magistrate and lord lieutenant. Not only by virtue of his position was he respected, but by reason of his many virtues; above all, his high-souled honor and integrity.

Mr. Vaughan had been originally a solicitor, but on the death of Constable Vaughan, a stern old uncle, whom he had scarcely ever seen, he found himself by will the residuary legatee of a noble property, with a large unincumbered rent roll. Cuthbert Vaughan was a very ambitious man, but the almost unexpected selection of himself as possessor of the Barclay Manor estates was necessarily a source of satisfaction. But chiefly was it so for the sake of his daughter Miriam—a girl of noble qualities, which had been restricted in a more humble sphere, but found ample play in the region to which she was now elevated. She was a very beautiful girl, rather tall and slim, and remarkable for her elegance of manner and speech. Her tastes were eminently artistic and literary, and her drawings were the admiration of her whole circle, while it was more than suspected she wrote for the magazines. But she was without any excessive pride, and as affable and agreeable as she was charitable and devoted in her intercourse with the poor.

The manor house was a large and rather rambling building, furnished in excellent taste, and having a noble library as well as a picture gallery. The father and daughter had been four years in possession, the latter being now nineteen years of age and both were already exceedingly popular in the country.

The squire had determined a few days before to clear out some lumber rooms and get rid of a lot of rubbish which had accumulated during some twenty years and which was gradually becoming a nuisance. Father and daughter were in the picture gallery, looking at the portraits of their ancestors, and enjoying as they walked the cool breeze from the park, when the butler entered with a workman bearing a picture.

"Sir," said the butler, "we have found this portrait in the lumber room, and as it clearly is a family likeness, we have brought it here to know what is to be done with it."

The picture was at the same moment rested on a chair, and Mr. and Miss Vaughan examined it. Both strangely enough felt a little shiver as they saw that handsome face, with the weak mouth and wicked eyes, which seemed to pierce the very marrow of their bones.

"You don't know who it is?" asked the squire.

"No, sir," replied the butler; "but I dare say Mrs. Graves will."

"Send for her at once," was the command.

A few minutes later the housekeeper entered, a staid woman of sixty, still active, with white hair and a very dignified aspect. At the sight of the portrait she turned pale, and with a deep sigh she fell upon a seat.

"You are agitated, Mrs. Graves," said the squire kindly.

"Yes, sir; pardon me, but the sight of that picture unnerves me. It is the portrait of Mr. Constable's only son," she faltered.

"Who put it in the lumber room?" continued the squire gravely.

"Ah, sir, it's the old story," she answered. "He was wild, and loved where his father wished him not. Both were self-willed and obstinate, and they separated. Young Mr. Constable went away and never was seen more. The father ordered the picture to the lumber room, and then never mentioned his name again."

"Put it up on the vacant space yonder," said the squire quietly.

"Where it was taken from," cried the woman, who had been thirty years in the family service.

"Ay, sir," the butler went on, "there was this bundle of papers beside the picture. What shall I do with them?"

"Take them to my study," observed the squire. "I will examine them by and by. And now, Miriam, to luncheon."

They went down, thinking of the stern old man who had sacrificed his son to a whim, or at best a better pride, and wondering how different matters might have been but for this arrangement.

"Miriam," said the father when they were alone, "I feel as if we were very much like usurpers and interlopers."

"How so?" asked his daughter in a tone of surprise.

"Suppose this young Constable left children or a child. He or they are the rightful heirs," he remarked, thoughtfully.

"But surely something would have been heard from them," she urged.

"That man whose portrait we have just seen was both weak and obstinate," was her father's response, "and would, after a quarrel, have kept doggedly aloof from his father."

"What then would you do?" asked Miriam.

"The estate has been left to us of the free will of the late Constable Vaughan," he said, "and is ours, but we are so rich that, should there be any direct heirs, it is our duty to find them and compensate all to the full extent in our power for their great loss."

"Certainly, papa," she said, "that is spoken like your own generous and noble self. How will you act?"

"I will see the solicitor to-day," he said, "and cause the most searching inquiries to be made."

And, after some further conversation, the subject dropped, and at the end of the meal the Squire went out and rode to the country town, where the firm of solicitors he wished to consult resided. In the evening after dinner the subject was resumed.

"Have you any news?" asked Miriam, noticing that her father was very serious.

"Yes. Constable Vaughan married two and twenty years ago a lady of some family, but, he means. The marriage was clandestine, and was only discovered when a child was born. Then came the explosion, and the young man went away to be heard of no more directly. The solicitors, knowing that he was still the heir, kept him in sight for some time; but for many years no tidings have come, and it is believed he is dead."

"But they are not sure, papa?" said Miriam.

"No; and I have ordered them to follow up the trace at no matter what cost, my dear," said the proud father. "Right must be done."

"Right must be done," she replied, in a dreamy kind of a way.

Later on in the evening, some young lady friends coming in, Mr. Vaughan retired to his study to smoke, and as he seated himself in his cosy arm-chair and with his pipe close to his hand, observed the parcel of papers. Taking out his penknife he opened the package, and saw at once that they contained legal documents. Putting on his spectacles, he began to examine them.

There were old leases, and then, in a small parcel tied with black silk, he found the certificate of young Constable's birth of his boy by Charles Constable Vaughan.

"The disinherited heir, if he had lived," said Mr. Vaughan, aloud. "Well, if he is alive, we will find him, and with the wealth I have at my disposal it will go hard if I cannot make up in some way for his loss."

He now took up another document, at sight of which he trembled violently, so violently that he could scarcely undo the fastenings. What was it that made him stare so wildly at this harmless bit of parchment?

He had read these words, "Deed of entail." Slowly he opened the large legal document, and at once plunged into it. With white face and quivering lip he read it from beginning to end.

"Merciful heaven!" he said at last, "if there is a living heir, we are no better off than we were five years ago. Old Constable had no power to will this property, which goes to heirs male without power of alienation."

Cuthbert Vaughan was a good man, but the possible prospect before him was a terrible one. Four years of possession had made him not only love the old place, but during that time he had acquired habits of luxury and ease which it would be hard to give up. He glanced at the documents, the lamp, the empty fire-place, and knew how much depended on a quarter of an hour's blaze.

As the suggestion arose in his inmost mind, he rose sternly, rang the bell and sent for his daughter.

When Miriam entered the study, he handed her a chair, and in very brief words told her the facts of his discovery.

"Well, papa," she answered, not knowing, in her ignorance of the law, the full force of his meaning, "what's the matter?"

"My child, if there be a male heir nearer than myself we must give up all and go back to our old life at Brompton. There may be no living male heir, but if there is, and my researches find him, we must retire in his favor, unless—"

"Unless what, father?" she asked.

"Unless we now destroy these documents, which alone prove his rights and invalidate the will."

"Rather die," she said. "No, father! As you said before, let justice be done. I would not hold one penny through fraud."

"You are right. I will see the solicitors to-morrow, and move heaven and earth to find him."

On the following morning Mr. Vaughan rode over and stated his case to the lawyers, handing them all the documents found in so strange and unexpected a manner. They looked at him in unfeigned admiration.

"This is a most serious matter," observed the elder partner. "For, between ourselves, we have never heard of the previous existence of this document, which, however, I believed to be destroyed. Of course should the heir be found, it places you in a most awkward position."

"How so?" asked Mr. Vaughan.

"You will have to give up possession. But if, before producing this document, you come to learn—" suggested the lawyer.

"No; let there be justice," replied the squire. "Do your duty, and I will do mine."

Both gentlemen shook the resolute heart-ily by the hand, and then by his instructions, sent off a special messenger to Paris. He was absent a week, and then the following telegram came:

"The heir is found. There is no doubt of his identity. He is a rather harum-scarum student in art, very poor, but without any of the vices of his class. There is the making of a sterling Englishman in him when away from his wild associates. He will come over in a few days. He begs you will stay where you are."

It must be said that both father and daughter felt easier and prepared at once for departure. The lawyer begged them to remain until the new heir came over, but they refused. They wished to slip away unobserved. The lawyer urged them to remove many things they had purchased, such as piano, harp and other things.

"Nothing," said Miriam, proudly; "nothing here belongs to us—we are usurpers."

On the morning of her intended departure there came a letter from the heir, begging his cousin to make Barclay Manor his residence until other arrangements might be made.

"If you leave," he said, "you will make me feel very unhappy and small."

But they shook their heads and retired.

CHAPTER II.

When Charles Constable Vaughan, after announcing his marriage and the birth of a son to his enraged parent, was ordered out of the house, he swore a furious oath never to cross the threshold of the door again, except as master.

He had a small income from his mother, and with this he emigrated to Boulogne, where for some time he lived the life of a Bohemian. Then influenced by his wife, a very talented woman, the daughter of a clergyman, he went to Paris, where both were able largely to add to their income by teaching music and drawing.

When their only son and child was eighteen, both were dead, leaving him to the mercies of the world with about a hundred a year, and at the same time with every document to prove his descent. But the young artists looked upon the estate lounging in the distance as a myth, and never thought anything more about it. He heard soon after of his grandfather's death and of his will, leaving all to Cuthbert Vaughan, and shrugging his shoulders went on with his work.

He was under the care and guardianship of an old French teacher, a very clever, eccentric painter, who was deeply attached to him. This man was a regular Bohemian, and delighted in artist life. But he was a man who worked and kept his pupil at work.

It was when Charles was nearly twenty-two, during a slack season, that we resume our narrative. M. Gerrard had been very ill, though now he was getting better. But his illness had been expensive, and his convalescence had promised to be more so, and Charles had spent his very last sou. They lived in small rooms adjacent to their studio, and Charles was just putting on his hat to go out.

"It is our last chance," he said. "I will try the bankers. I will not be long—not more than an hour."

But many hours passed, night came, and still Charles Constable Vaughan did not return.

"I hope no harm has happened to him," said the old painter, with a sigh, forgetting his own self pings in his anxiety.

Vaughan had gone on doggedly to the bankers, with his hat over his eyes and his hands in his pockets. He was doing that which his soul rebelled against. He had a belief that he was doing his duty, firmly believed that he would meet with a refusal. But how to open the subject—how to excuse at the first blush his presence? Well, he would delay until after a refusal. This would give him an excuse for backing out at the last moment. With this harassing subterfuge, therefore, he entered boldly.

"I suppose," he said to the urbane clerk, "you have not got any letters for me?"

"Yes, sir, one has been here two days, but we did not know your address we kept it for your use." The unexpected reply, and the epistle was handed to him.

It was addressed to "Charles Constable Vaughan, Esq., immediate and important." The young man stared with a look of perfect bewilderment, and, after saying a word to the clerk, seated himself and read:

"Sir: I wish to see you at once on business of the most vital importance, and hope to be favored with a call. I shall keep in all day, hoping that you will favor me at your earliest convenience.

EDWARD LEIGH.

For Messrs. Foxham Sharp."

"Thank you," said Constable, utterly forgetting his errand, and hurried out in the direction of Mauricet.

He found a very polite, middle-aged gentleman, who received him with great courtesy. After some few words he said:

"I presume there can be no difficulty about proving your identity?"

"My bankers have paid me the interest on my little property for four years," replied Charles, in bewildered tones; "but there," taking out a pocket book, "I have the copies of my fathers certificate of birth, his marriage and my certificate."

The lawyer examined them methodically.

"Sir, allow me to congratulate you on being the owner of nine thousand a year, and as fine a property as any in the west of England. But you are faint, sir. Wine—coffee—a violent ring—"wine at once!"

"No more," said Constable, faintly. "I have been without food too long to drink."

The amazed lawyer at once ordered an improvised dinner, and then proceeded to explain everything.

"So you see, sir, you have been owner for four years, but from no fault of these people. Few persons—ahem!" he added—"would have behaved so nobly," he cried, listening in a daze. "I can scarcely believe my own good fortune, or that girl's generous self-denial. It was a great temptation."

"Yes, sir, bravely overcome. And now to dinner. You can give me your instructions after."

Constable ate and drank in a dream, talked in a dream, and dictated letters in a dream, but at last he awoke to reality.

"I had forgotten," he said wildly. "I must be going. I will see you to-morrow."

"I have no check book," observed the lawyer, "but if a hundred pounds in cash is of any use—"

Constable shook him heartily by the hand, and "burning the pavement," as the French say, in a fluere soon reached his old friend's lodging. His first act was to toss the money on the table, and then to bawl at the concierge to go for everything his friend required.

After seeing him partake of a sufficient meal, he told his story to the amazed Bohemian.

"There is only one thing," said Mr. Gerard, later in the evening, "I am sorry to part—"

"Part! Never! You shall come and establish yourself in London, paint my portrait, my wife's portrait, my children's—all my friends' portraits."

And so it happened that a week later, the young heir of Barlay Manor started for England, in company with the lawyer and the delighted painter. When he reached home he found a kind but proud note from Miriam, declining certain splendid offers he had made, and intimating that their course in life must in future be apart.

CHAPTER III.

When Mr. Vaughan sold his practice for a small sum, he invested it, with a laughing remark that it would do for a rainy day, which he never expected, of course, would come. It was now nearly all he had to depend on. But being determined not to be idle, he went to the gentlemen who bought his business and frankly told his story, knowing his ability, and, above all, his connections, they at once offered him £200 a year.

They took a house at Brompton, a house with a garden, and more room than they required. But to obtain the position this was necessary. But Miriam quietly intimated her intention to take lodgers. Mr. Vaughan started, but made no opposition.

It was the sight of his brave daughter seeing to her household affairs that kept him from repining. She did not neglect her painting; she even hired a piano. But months passed on and no lodgers came. One day, however, a French gentleman, speaking no English, came to see the apartments, which consisted of three rooms, one of which was very light and airy. He said he was an artist with one pupil, in rather delicate health, and would like to take the place if he could have the occasional use of the garden. They were duly installed the next day, the pupil, Mr. Spencer, being a young man who looked rather delicate, and who appeared to have his eyes affected, for he wore protective spectacles. His manner was exceedingly agreeable, and before he had been a week in the house all were great friends. He was an enthusiastic artist, and finding out rapidly Miriam's artistic tastes, was soon a fellow-pupil with her under M. Dubois, and, before three months were over, Mr. Spencer was hard at work on a portrait of his fair landlady.

It was impossible for two young persons of similar tastes and habits to be so constantly in one another's society and not become friends. Mr. Spencer was a man of cultivated taste and much information; above all, he was an enthusiast in art. So was Miriam, and by degrees their relationships became more intimate. Miriam listened for his footsteps; her heart beat wildly at the sound of his voice. Without a spoken word they were engaged by that sympathy of the soul which requires no words."

"Mr. Vaughan," said the young man to the lawyer, "I am something more than a mere student. I have ample means to support a wife, and my family is good. If you will only give your consent you shall have every reference, and you shall be introduced to my relations."

"My dear boy, if you can satisfy me on that point," replied Mr. Vaughan, "I cannot wish for a better son-in-law. We are not so rich as we might have been, but Miriam is a treasure in herself."

"She is, then. Then I have your consent?" he cried, gleefully, and hurried away to Miriam.

Now, as both loved deeply and sincerely, it is needless to say that before evening they were engaged.

Next day they were to go to the Royal Academy exhibition to see the picture in its place. Mr. Vaughan and Mr. Dubois accompanied them, and after some delay contrived to reach the spot where it was hung.

"Sold," was marked on it with a little ticket.

"I made no reserve," replied Mr. Spencer; "but will make inquiries."

He shortly returned, and said it had been bought at the high figure he had marked to prevent a sale, by Mr. Charles Constable Vaughan. Miriam turned pale, her father coughed, and shortly after the whole party left the gallery and returned home.

"You seem very much annoyed," said the young artist. "May I ask why?"

"It is unnecessary for me to explain," said Miriam, but that gentleman's name is associated with a very painful epoch in our lives, and why he should buy my portrait is indeed a mystery."

"Because he painted it," said the artist, in a voice of deep emotion, "and would allow no other man on earth to possess either the copy or the original."

"Sir," cried Mr. Vaughan, "what do you mean?"

"That I am Charles Constable Vaughan, your cousin—in a few weeks to be your son-in-law," he said, clasping Miriam to his heart.

"Sir," she said, "this is too bad. You ought to know how I disliked that man."

"And I came to make you love him," he answered. "And now, sir," he added, "you and I are the only parties interested in the end."

"The only ones," replied the lawyer, moodily. "Our joint consent can end the entail," he went on.

"It can, but I shall not consent—"

But before he could finish the sentence he had torn the deed and thrust it into a fire, which he had cunningly ordered, and by dint of a diligent use of the poker it was destroyed.

"Now, my dear sir, I am wholly in your power. You are master of Barclay Manor—will you give it me at some future time as your heir, and, in the mean time, let me take this fair treasure on security?"

"Cousin Charles," observed Miriam, a little later in the day, "it is clear you were not to be outdone."

"No, my darling. I loved you before I saw you for your noble generosity—when I saw you I adored you for yourself, and determined to win you. Have I done so?" he added.

"Yes, my lord and master," she said, with a smile, "you have conquered."

"I have won a prize fit for an emperor," he replied.

It was indeed a gala day when, after a brief journey to Paris, Mr. Vaughan returned to Barclay Manor with Mr. Vaughan, junior, and his wife, Miriam. Nothing ever was said of the ownership of the estate to which, only eleven years after, Charles succeeded. He never regretted the stratagem by which he won a wife, nor the courage with which she had helped her father to withstand their great temptation.

PENOBSCOT, ss. At the Supreme Judicial Court which was begun and holden at Bangor, within and for the County of Penobscot, on the first Tuesday, being the 6th day of January, A. D. 1880.

John E. P. Wheelden, of Bangor, in the County of Penobscot, Plaintiff, vs.

William H. Smith, of Brooklyn, in County of Kings, and State of New York, Defendant.

In a plea of title case, for that the said Deft. at said Bangor, on the 29th day of August, A. D. 1879, at the Pltf. a certain horse then and there owned by Pltf., to drive from said Bangor, to Belfast, in the County of Waldo, and back there, at and about said Belfast, for a week from said 29th day of August, A. D. 1879, and then drive back to said Bangor, for a certain sum of money, to wit: the sum of two dollars per day, and the Pltf. then and there delivered to the said Deft. the said horse to drive and use as aforesaid, and the said Deft. on the said 29th day of August, A. D. 1879, and the following day, to wit, the 30th day of August, A. D. 1879, by his servants and agents so carelessly, immoderately and recklessly drove said horse, that by reason thereof and for want of due care of the said horse, the said horse was thereby spoiled and his value wholly lost to the Pltf.

Also for that the Pltf. at Belfast, Waldo County, Maine, on the 29th day of August, A. D. 1879, was possessed of a certain mare of chestnut color, of the value of four hundred dollars, and being so possessed, thereafterwards, on the same day lost the same, and the same thereafterwards, on the same day came into the hands and possession of the said Deft., yet the said Deft., though well knew the same to belong to said Pltf., yet intending to injure and defraud him the said Pltf. wrongfully refused to deliver the same to said Pltf., though thereto requested, but thereafterwards on the same day, converted the same to his own use.

Writ dated December 1st, 1879.

To the Honorable Judge of Probate for the County of Penobscot:

The undersigned, administrator of the estate of William R. Reed, late of Bangor, in said County, deceased, respectfully represents that the goods and chattels, rights and credits of said deceased are not sufficient to pay his just debts and charges of administration, by the sum of about one hundred and fifty dollars.

Wherefore your petitioner prays your Honor to grant him power to sell by license at public or private sale, and convey the whole of the following described real estate of the deceased, (including the reversion of the widow's dower therein) as the residue would be greatly depreciated by a sale of any portion, viz: All the real estate of which the deceased died seized, viz: Half acres, more or less, situated in said Bangor, with buildings thereon, or less, of wild land in Carmel; 4 an acre of land in Carmel, with house frame thereon; to satisfy said debts, expenses of sale, and charges of administration.

No additional charge will be made for printing the name and request to return, across the left hand upper corner of the envelopes specified by the Post Office Department, (samples of which may be seen at the Cashier's window,) when ordered in lots of not less than 500.

A request for the return of a letter to the writer, if inclosed within thirty days, or less, written or printed, with the writer's name, post office and State, across the left end of the envelope, on the face side, will be complied with.

☞ The public are earnestly recommended to procure Stamped envelopes with printed return request, as the expense is less, and letters thus inclosed, if not delivered to the person addressed, are returned to the writer free of charge.

First class envelopes of above furnished at $22.2 per thousand.
